Russia Fears Defeat Of British Laborites May Affect Relations

Soviets Are Anxious Regarding Attitude of Conservatives to Loan

REDS THREATEN REVENGE

MacDonald Cabinet Probably Will Resign After Conclusion of Business

By Associated Press

Moscow—The defeat of the Labor government in England has produced divergent opinions in Soviet Russia In some quarters it is feared that it means the death of the present Anglo-Russian treaty and projected loan while in others it is insisted that the Conservatives will be forced to come to terms with the Soviets because of England's economic need of Russia.

M. Stekloff in the newspaper Izvestia, organ of the federal central executive committee, says that no political party in history ever deserved defeat more than Premier MacDonald's. In his opinion the publication of the "spurious Zinovieff letter" had a great effect on the result, as by this move "MacDonuld signed his own death warrant in favor of Baldwin and Curzon."

"It now is evident," he adds "that in England as in all other countries the Labor party can capture power only by a definite and open class struggle."

London—The Soviet chief of publicity, Karl Radek, writing in the newspaper Pravda, warns Great Britain to expect reprisals for the Zinovieff letter incident, according to the Moscow correspondent of the Daily Express. Kadek is quoted as declaring that "Premier MacDonald knew that the letter emanated from the same officials who falsified the documents which formerly served as the basis of Lord Curzon's note."

London — The laborite cabinet headed by Premier MacDonald, after a two hour session Friday morning is understood to have decided to remain in office a few days and then resign before the assembling of the new parliament

It is expected that the cabinet will resign next week rather than meet the new parliament and be turned out upon the king's address.

The desire on the part of the government to remain in office a few days longer is due to the necessity of clearing up departmental business. Meanwhile Mr. McDonald will spend his last weekend for a long time—perhaps forever—in the prime ministerial official rustic retreat at Chequers. Another cabinet meeting is set for Tuesday but it is understood the members of the cabinet have left the premier free to decide upon their resignation before then if he so desires.

London—Buoyancy spread throughout the stock exchange Friday in consequence of the sweeping Conservative victory in the parliamentary elections An accumulation of buying orders from the provinces and the continent came in for execution.

Brokers were having a busier time than they had experienced for some months.

The advances included fractions on the war loans and other government bonds, from half to one per cent on home rails and from six pence to a shilling on British industrial.

Republican Candidate Will Take Large Majority Despite LaFollette's Angling for Labor Vote

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1924 by the Post Pub. Co.

Philadelphia — Pennsylvania and Delaware show every sign of giving Calvin Coolidge substantial majorities notwithstanding the effort of the LaFollette people to win the labor vote in both states

The Republican managers are talking of a record majority, the largest of any Republican state in the Union but they admit their difficulty in arousing interest in a one-sided campaign. The get-out the-vote movement is proceeding so well that the chances are Pennsylvania will poll an unusually large total

The new voters will more than overcome the losses to LaFollette for it appears that the regular Republicans have been the stay-at homes in Pennsylvania. It takes time and money and organization to get out the vote and the Republicans have all three in Pennsylvania

All this effort, however, is not directed merely at getting a large vote for the sake of making a record It has back of it a distinct drive for congressional seats. There are six Democratic districts which the Republicans hope to capture Their chances depend entirely on what the LaFollette voters do, for here as elsewhere in congressional campaigns, the Democratic nominees have openly sought LaFollette support and in many cases endorsements have not been difficult to get.

SENATE RACE UNCERTAIN

Just across the line in Delaware is another interesting situation, for while Delaware's electoral vote seems certain to be cast for Coolidge, the senatorial race is by no means a certainty for the Republicans Coleman Dupont, who won the Republican nomination after a hard struggle in the primaries, has not succeeded in erasing all the friction inside the party, in fact the Democratic hopes of electing James Tunnell are based largely on the factional quarrels provoked by the primary contest of Dupont. The LaFollette groups also are out of tune with each other, the socialists, the single-taxers, and the out-and-out-LaFollette men being agreed on the presidential race but not in unison on the senatorial contest

As usual the traditional troubles of the Dupont family are mixed up in the situation. One wing is backing General Dupont while some of the cousins are said to be the main support of Tunnell. It would not be surprising to see a Democratic United States senator from Delaware though this will not occur if the Coolidge majority takes on the proportions of a landslide. That is Dupont's principal hope. In the last few days there has been a drift most everywhere in the east to Davis, but this is largely the vote that LaFollette took from the Democrats at the outset. It will have more of an influence on the congressional than the presidential contest.

LaFollette Condemns Occupation of Haiti and Bombardment of Vera Cruz

By Associated Press

Albany, N. Y.—Senator Robert M La Follette, Independent candidate for President, was headed westward again Friday to challenge the Coolidge administration in Pittsburg, home of Secretary Mellon, before invading Ohio once more to wind up his campaign with an address Saturday night in Cleveland.

The Wisconsin senator was on his way from Boston where in an address Thursday night he attacked the foreign policy of the Harding-Coolidge and recent administrations.

Devoting a considerable portion of his Thursday night's speech to the occupation of Haiti by American Marines, Senator La Follette declared that this action was taken "not to make the world safe for democracy but to make Haiti safe for American bankers."

"And in making Haiti safe for American bankers," he said, "we have killed between two and three thousand people, whose only offense was the of fense of defending their liberties '

Declaring that for 50 years the "American State Department has supported American investors in Mexico ' Mr. La Follette asserted that during the bombardment of Vera Cruz American boys lost their lives "for the protection of American oil interests '

By Associated Press

New York—Peace reigned in Chinatown Friday News that a truce had been signed traveled rapidly through the quarters Thursday night There was a noticable lifting of the tension that has pervaded the section since the feud between the On Leongs and the Hip Sings began

The only reminder of the war that has cost eight lives and a score of injuries here, was the large number of bluecoats who continued their watch. The police department, notwithstanding the announcement of a two weeks armistice decided not to relax their vigilance

Announcement of the truce came from the Chinese Consul General Chang one of the leaders in the peace movement that was almost frustrated by the killing of a Hip Sing Tong man in the shadow of the building in Chinatown where the peace parleys were being held

By the time the excitement of the shooting had died down many of the merchants who attended the conference departed for their homes in Philadelphia, Washington Boston and Chicago, complaining that although they had been assured that leaders of the On Leongs would be present, not one was there and asserting that a settlement of the differences was impossible When the consul general made his announcement several hours later the news came as a surprise

The truce became effective at midnight and included all Chinese settlements throughout the country according to the consul general, who said that efforts will be made to establish permanent peace in the two weeks in which both sides have agreed to lay aside their differences

PROBE LABOR DONATIONS

Contributions from Unions Are Entirely Voluntary, Chairman Says

By Associated Press

Chicago—Republican campaign contributions to date have totalled approximately $3 700 000. William V. Hodges the national treasurer testified Friday before the Chicago section of the senate campaign fund committee

Of this amount more than $750,000 has been sent back to the states leaving nearly $3,000 000 for the presidential senatorial and congressional campaigns.

Hodges was directed to send in accurate figures for collections to next Monday. Chairman Borah saying that the committee wanted the figures for all the national political parties to go to the country before the voters go to the polls

The national treasurer said the returns would have to be unaudited and without regard to what would be returned to the states He added that he thought the request a "little unfair "

"The impression had gone to the country," said Senator Borah, "that the last days may be the 'slush' days I am interested as a partisan as well as a member of the committee in letting the country have all the facts with all the organization treated alike.

Hodges then agreed to furnish the figures Samuel Untermeyer, counsel associated with attorneys for Senator LaFollette, said he could not quite understand the distinction as to returns of funds to the state that it all goes to the states in the campaign.

Washington, D. C—The activities of the American Federation of Labor on behalf of Senator LaFollette and the operations of the Grundy committee in its collection of Republican funds in Pennsylvania were further inquired into Friday by the Washington section of the senate campaign fund committee.

Frank Morrison, Secretary of the Federation of Labor, testified that the organization had collected $23 000 and spent $20 000 in promoting its campaign for LaFollette. He declared contributions were voluntary, that the regular force at federation headquarters here had done much of the extra work entailed, and that expenses had been kept further down by enclosing campaign circulars with letters sent out from headquarters to local unions.

Joseph R Grundy, the Pennsylvania manufacturer who is head of the Republican ways and means committee in counties of that state outside the Pittsburg district, told the committee that collections by his committee had reached a total of more than $521 000 bringing the total Republican fund raised in Pennsylvania, according to figures previously given, to $791 000

Chairman Caraway of the committee drew Morrison into a long discussion of the action of the executive council of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York which Thursday night reversed a previous endorsement of LaFollette and came out for John W Davis

TELLS OF STUDENT CLUB IN CHICAGO

Organization and activities of Chicago Student Fellowship were explained by Miss Lucy Helen Pearson, director of Appleton Womans club, in an address at first of the church night suppers Thursday conducted at the First Congregational church by the board of deacons Dr. J. S. Reeve, senior deacon, presided.

Miss Pearson declared that there are more than 100,000 young people living in hall bedrooms in Chicago and taking courses at various professional schools there. These people lacked the cultural contact which would make them a success as they went to points all over the world to begin their life work. The Student Fellowship, purely non-sectarian and without aiming to carry out charity or reform, was launched a number of years ago and has given to pupils of the various schools the associations they needed to overcome the loneliness and difficulties of big city life. Many examples were given of how the organization functions and Miss Pearson also described how the city of Chicago received the idea and gives assistance of every kind, including free medical help to those without funds.

The idea of Student Fellowship was original with Miss Pearson and the success of it in Chicago has led her to inaugurate a plan to extend it to other cities and make it a world project if possible. An emblem has been adopted which can be worn by all creeds, nationalities and professions belonging to the organization.

Two solos were sung by Miss Madonna Flagg of Lawrence Conservatory of Music and devotions were led by Dr. H. E. Peabody, pastor. These suppers will be held weekly, beginning at 6:15 and ending at 8 o'clock.

CLERKS ORGANIZE AFTER ADDRESSES ON THEIR DUTIES

Town, City and Village Officials Get Together to Discuss Their Problems

A permanent organization was effected at a meeting of city, village and town clerks of Outagamie-co in the court house Thursday. The temporary officers of the local clerks association were retained as permanent officers until the next meeting.

The officers are Carl Ludwig, Greenville, chairman, and County Clerk John F. Hantschel, secretary. It was decided to hold an annual meeting in May, subject to the call of the county clerk. The annual meeting was set for May because that is the time when newly elected clerks take office. Contact with clerks of greater experience would be a distinct benefit to them, it was held. A resolution was passed requesting the county board of supervisors for per diem compensation and mileage.

Twenty-five of the thirty-one clerks in the county were at the meeting in response to the call issued by the county clerk. Addresses were delivered in the forenoon by John A. Lonsdorf, district attorney, E. L. Williams, city clerk of Appleton, and Louis Wolf, Kaukauna city clerk, while the afternoon session was devoted to discussion of various problems pertaining to the offices of clerks.

LAW EXPLAINED

Mr. Lonsdorf explained the law on a number of functions of clerks' offices. He called especial attention to the procedure of issuing licenses for operation of soft drink parlors. Clerks, he said are without authority to issue such licenses unless so directed by the city council or by the town or village board.

The district attorney reported that since no search warrant is required for licensed soft drink parlors, frequently the raid is illegal for the reason that the license issued did not comply with the legal requirements. A license can be issued only upon a ... by the governing municipal board, he said, and the transaction must be ...ded by the clerk. The minutes are sometimes submitted in court as proof that the establishment was licensed.

TELLS ABOUT ELECTION

Clerk Wolf gave a talk on election machinery, printing of ballots, issuance of absent voters' ballots, crediting of votes, etc. He declared that although it is possible to vote the straight ticket for the regular party nominees for president, the same cannot be done on the Independent ticket. While a cross placed above the column of the Republican, Democrat and Prohibition parties is a vote for respective presidential candidate, on the Independent ticket a cross must be placed after the names of each of the thirteen electors pledged to that candidate. Every ballot containing a cross over the Independent column is to be considered illegal and must be thrown out, he said.

In explaining the technicalities of splitting a vote on the state and county tickets, he said a voter may jump from one column of one party to that of another, placing a cross after whom ever he pleases. A cross placed above the column of one party is a straight vote for all the candidates of that party. But if crosses are in addition placed after the names of candidates of other parties, the vote is legal, because the intent of the voter is clearly that he wishes to vote a straight party ticket with the exception of several candidates in other parties. If the voter, however, places crosses after two different persons who are candidates for the same office, the vote is illegal.

PREPARE TAX ROLLS

Mr. Williams explained the proper method of preparing a tax roll and answered questions on technicalities of this work.

The method of handling dog damage claims was explained by Mr. Hantschel. When cattle have been injured by dogs, the owner obtains from the county clerk the form for making a damage claim and presents this claim to the local clerk. The local board investigates the damage and reports to the county board of supervisors which allows or overrules the claim.

The home rule amendment which will be voted upon in the November election provoked a discussion. Mr. Williams advocating the measure and several clerks from rural communities opposing it. Fear was expressed that home rule might carry city councils and village boards too far in municipal ownership of utilities. Mr. Williams contended that the public welfare is the highest law, and that if the public health, comfort and economy of a community demands it, a city should have the right to maintain a municipal ice house, just as it may have in operating a waterworks or electric light plant. He also maintained that home rule is strictly a matter affecting cities and villages, and that rural communities ought not to oppose a measure that does not affect them in the least.

Following the meeting, the county clerk distributed the official and sample ballots to the clerks for use in the election precincts. Town clerks also were given copies of the town laws passed by legislature.

PUT OFF COUNCIL MEETING TO NOV. 5

The adjourned meeting of the common council scheduled for Friday evening will not be held, but has been postponed until the next regular meeting date, Wednesday evening. An extra meeting was deemed advisable in order to open bids and award contracts on the Richmond-st sewer so as not to delay the project. But since then it has developed that several aldermen will not be able to be present.

STEVENS POINT GETS POSTMASTERS MEET

Postmaster William H. Zuehlke has returned from a meeting of the officers and executive committee of the Wisconsin Postmasters association, of which he is a member. The meeting was held in the federal building of Milwaukee and was called to discuss the time and place for the next convention of the association.

On account of this being a presidential election year no convention was held for fear it might give the appearance that political issues would be injected into the election. But with the holiday season coming on, it was thought best to postpone it until the first week in June, 1925.

Milwaukee, Ashland and Stevens Point sought to obtain the 1925 convention, but a majority of the committee voted to hold it in Stevens Point.

Flashes Out Of The Air

A lot of folks who own radio receiving sets will be glad when the political campaign is over and the air is lightened of the burden of political addresses. Almost every station radiocasts one or more political talks in an evening. Thursday night there were easily two score or more political talks on the air from 7 o'clock to 9:30.

Senator LaFollette, who was in poor voice Wednesday night when he spoke at Schenectady, was going strong Thursday night in Boston. His hoarseness had left him. The applause he received did not indicate he was heard by a record breaking crowd.

Tonight will be a big night for the kiddies. Dozens of stations have announced novelty Halloween parties and no doubt the youngsters will gather around the radio sets tonight to "cash in" on the promises.

WGN, Chicago, will radiocast a play by play report of the Illinois-Iowa football game Saturday afternoon. This will be the only important game in the Big Ten conference.

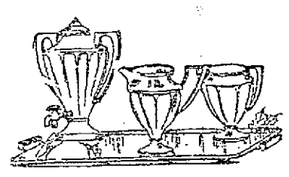

A number of stations will cooperate to radiocast the final political message of President Coolidge at 9 o'clock next Monday evening. Mr. Coolidge is expected to summarize Republican principles in his last appeal before the opening of the polls.

The Sixth Infantry band concert will be radiocast tonight by KSD, St. Louis. This is one of the most popular radio entertainments.

A classical program will be presented from the studio of WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., beginning at 9 o'clock Friday night.

A lot of little towns in Iowa are sending their talent to Shenedoah to put on programs radiocast by KFNK. Tonight talent from Nordway, Iowa, is to put on the concert.

THE MALCONTENTS IN WEBSTER'S DAYS

In a speech in the United States senate in 1838 Daniel Webster spoke these words:

There are persons who constantly clamor. They complain of oppression, speculation and the pernicious influences of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations, and all means by which small capitals become united in order to produce important and beneficial results. They carry on mad hostility against all established institutions. They would choke the fountain of industry and dry all the streams. In a country of unbounded liberty they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality they would move heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more evenly divided than anywhere else they rend the air shouting agrarian doctrines. In a country where the wages of labor are high beyond parallel they would teach the laborer that he is but an oppressed slave.

The striking similarity between the foregoing and utterances frequently heard today will be noted. Times have not changed. The attempt to create class prejudice and antagonism has gone forward without interruption.

Those who declaim against present conditions and existing institutions have no good word to say for the many obvious blessings enjoyed by the American people. They shut their eyes to the privileges and opportunities of American citizenship, and to the fact that the people of the United States are better off than the people of any other country in the world. All they see are a few wrongs and abuses which are inevitable in any great social or political aggregation. They will not see the fact that there has been a steady and large improvement in the individual welfare and the prosperity of all classes. Nor do they wish to use constituted and orderly processes of government, which are entirely adequate, to correct whatever injustices there may be, but propose the overthrow of the foundations of government and radical and fantastic measures.

The economic and social advances that have been made in rural life and in the world of labor are without parallel. When contrasted with conditions in the pioneer days of Daniel Webster they represent the height of luxury. The same is true when contrasted with the lot of labor and the farmer in all other countries. Still, we are told, the American government is a failure, that labor is in a state of bondage and the farmer is ground to pieces by the machinations of Wall street.

It is stated, and we have no doubt the statement is true, that there are more farmer-owned automobiles in Wisconsin than in all of Europe put together, and more workingman-owned automobiles in the state than in the whole of Europe. Millions have come to free America to better themselves, and all have done so. The so-called down-trodden people of the United States are not flocking to any other nation for self-government. Before being led off on wild tangents people in this country who are prone to be discontented should make a careful survey of what they have to be thankful for, and of the wealth of opportunity and privilege that is their inalienable right.

Calvin Coolidge grew up as a poor farmer boy. His father today is a humble farmer like the average farmer in New England or in Wisconsin. Probably ninety-nine out of one hundred of all successful American men, particularly those who achieved real greatness, were of similar origin. Where else are such things possible? Nowhere do merit and real worth, in whatever walk of life, count for so much as in this country. Nowhere else is the same self-advancement open to all. Men and women are what they make themselves in this country and none of the injustices complained of can stop them. These things we ought to keep in mind in our political policies and in our attachments.

TWO CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

Two amendments to the constitution passed by the legislature are to be submitted at the Tuesday election to the voters of Wisconsin for ratification or rejection. One is known as the home-rule amendment, a change in the organic law of the state designed to give cities a larger measure of self-government. The amendment has the support of the Wisconsin League of Municipalities, and is similar in its scope to rights enjoyed by many states, including Minnesota, Michigan and Ohio. We think it will work for better local government as well as for efficiency and economy. It will enable cities to manage their affairs as they desire without having to go to the legislature for a grant of power. We believe that the largest measure of local government is desirable and beneficial and, therefore, that the home-rule amendment should be ratified.

The other amendment is that which is known as the forest amendment. It would permit the state to engage in and encourage reforestation, which is one of the greatest economic needs of Wisconsin, and which should have early attention. It has been well said that forest development is the keystone of the industrial structure. It is also an integral part of agricultural prosperity. The proposed change commits the state to no program and appropriates no money. It is purely an enabling act leaving to the legislature the working out of a detailed policy. This amendment also should be ratified.

WORK

A brief news message from Berlin says many German princes have been forced by altered financial circumstances to go to work, and they are much pleased with the change in the mode of living. They have discovered that idleness and pleasure were irksome, compared with the delight which they obtain from useful employment.

Members of the leisure class are not of much good for themselves, and in rare cases are they of much good to the state or the public. All in all, they are social, civic and economic parasites. Rich men in America and in Europe have given much of their wealth to the public. This applies especially to Americans who earned their fortunes themselves. But those of the leisure class who inherit positions and affluence take life as easy as possible, and they do not work or distribute any of their capital or income because they regard themselves as superior and privileged beings.

To those who work it is incomprehensible how any one can find pleasure in idleness and pastime as a habit. The joy of life lies in doing some agreeable work and doing it well. The German princes are learning this. Their experience is giving them a new view of society and state, and it is presenting to them pleasures which they never had imagined existed. The greatest satisfaction is that of being useful.

SCHOOL LIFE VERSUS HYGIENE.

The purpose of the title is not to display bias against teachers. I like teachers. They're an exceptionally fine class of people, take them by and large, both the men and the women. And the feminine ones—I should advise every young man to marry a teacher if he can't find a nurse who will have him. Marry the teacher and the nurse will follow in due time. I myself was headed straight for a teacher when my nurse at the last minute, said "All right, let's go to Niagara Falls." A close squeak, I call it—supposing she had said Hawaii?

I chose the title of this talk because the melancholy days have come, and one thing that makes 'em melancholy in too many homes is the way the more delicate children begin to droop and fall back into a lower state of health about this season of the year. School life does it, not the teacher, tho some teachers do contribute toward the melancholy in an unwarrantable manner, and that is all I have or wish to chide teachers for—infractions of the rules or hygiene when such infractions menace the health of pupils.

In most communities nowadays there is some sort of preliminary medical inspection of pupils at the beginning of the school term, with a view to the detection and exclusion of pupils whose condition may endanger the health of others. This is good economy, common sense, for it prevents the spread of many major diseases, diseases which, nowadays, intelligent parents would prefer to have their children escape.

Now it seems to me, with all due regard and affection for the teachers that they, too ought to be subject to a preliminary examination. That may not seem so important in respect to the common contagious or communicable diseases. But it would be a good way to detect and exclude the neurotic the tuberculosis, the insane and the physically unfit teachers. It is quite as essential, in the interest of the pupils' health, to exclude from school the teacher who would sneak in with a bundle of nerves concealed under her factitious calm as it is to exclude the boy or girl from the high or low strata who harbors neiculi.

As a general rule the teacher who places restrictions around the freedom of pupils to get a drink or to answer the calls of nature, and makes whispering a monstrous crime, and generally harasses and embarasses the pupils at her mercy in every little way she can devise under the excuse of discipline, is subnormal physically and if the truth of her condition were known she would be given a vacation as unfit for the duties of teaching. Drop in on an afternoon after the close of the session and you'll find her, usually, deriving great satisfaction out of the flaying of a number of unhealthy youngsters with her ruffled nerves. But hold your breath, for the teacher and pupils need all the foul air there is. It is the foul air that keeps them there. It makes the teacher "nervous;" it makes the pupils restless and inattentive. Don't say anything about it to anybody. If you do you'll make everybody mad.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Vitimines.

Is it harmful to take Vitimines made by the . . . people during pregnancy? How many should I take? (Mrs. F. R. A.)

Answer—You'll get more vitimines in a glass of milk or an orange or a dish of lettuce or an egg or some cabbage, carrot or tomato than in a whole package of the humbug nostrum.

Outstanding Ears.

Is an operation for outstanding ears serious and is there any danger of ruining the hearing? (K. J. S.)

Answer—No danger of impairing the hearing.

A Passing Vagary.

Please tell me the name of a good cancer doctor who gives the Abrams electronic treatments and where he is located. (Mrs. K. J.)

Answer—No cancer doctor gives such treatments. You have to go to a charlatan or a short cut healer for that kind of flapdoodle.

SPEAKING OF SUCKERS

I am afraid we must award the prize to the farmer. He will "bite" on the flimsiest bait of the entire sucker family.

The more he gets stung the easier mark he seems to become.

Look at the poor "suckers" in North Dakota. Seven years ago North Dakota had low taxes, only two hundred thousand dollars of bonded indebtedness, and over a million dollars in the state treasury.

A chap named Townley, who had made a failure as a farmer hatched up a Socialistic scheme, named it "The Non Partisan League," sold it to the suckers at ten dollars a bite, and oh oh how they did grab it!

Now North Dakota has an empty treasury, a bonded indebtedness of over Twenty-three million dollars, and taxes are so high that many farmers are abandoning their farms in despair. And Townley? Oh, he isn't worrying. He got his while the getting was good. These fellows always do.

Some Wisconsin suckers took a grab at the "Non Partisan" hook but North Dakota has been too well advertised, and the fishing was not particularly good in Wisconsin.

Now we find them hitched to the tail of the Labor Party's political kite.

Some combination! The Laborites are for little work—school hours; big pay, and low cost of living. Very consistent of course!

The farmer is looking for a price for his produce that will net him a fair return for his labor.

LaFollette told the Labor men at Brooklyn they must have higher wages, and the cost of living must be kept down. He said that the cost of living commenced to mount in 1897. Wonder if he remembers prices farmers were getting at that time, and if he wants them restored. Dressed pork sold at $3.25 per 100, good cows, $1.00 per 100 lbs., fair 75c, poor unsalable; sheep, good, $1.00 each; eggs, 10c per doz; cheese 7c per lb.; butter, common to good 8 to 12 c; strictly fancy, retail, 15c; wheat 45c bu.; oats 15c; barley 15c bu. In the west corn was burned for fuel because cheaper than coal.

But what's the use. They will keep right on biting. They are built that way.

HENRY JAMES AND THE MONEY QUESTION

The popular conception of Henry James is that he despised popularity, that he cared nothing for a wide circulation for his novels, that he cared nothing for money, that he wrote to please himself, that he made his work as obscure as he could to show his contempt for the rabble. Not only is that the popular conception of James but many of his worshippers try to perpetuate that literary myth. They seem to think that the greatness of "the master" (as James "fans" almost invariably refer to him) will be enhanced thereby.

The facts are that Henry James, sincere literary artist though he was and unwilling though he was at all times to compromise with popular taste, was quite as eager to win popularity, to make money with his books and to bask in the sunshine of popular fame as the most trivial scribbler who sells a million copies of a worthless melodrama.

For years and years James tried and tried to write books that would win the favor of a large public instead of a few hundred or at least a few thousand fanatical worshippers of his art. He did not have the knack of winning the crowd and nothing he could do could make his work popular. A few continued to call him the greatest novelist of his time, but the millions continued to ignore him. Most people did not know that he was on earth.

AWOKE PUBLIC

Once, in 1879, he made the larger public conscious of his existence when he published "Daisy Miller." But then the wider public did not become conscious of him to admire but to abuse him. At least that was the case in America. "Daisy Miller," which is hardly more than a short story and can be read through in a hour or two, portrays the crudeness of a typical American rich family traveling in Europe. Their provincialism is contrasted with the grace and culture of Europe, and the daring freedom of the typical American girl is described not from the point of view of the American who admires her democratic ways but from the point of view of the highly cultures Europeans who look upon her as crude and depraved.

The American public was outraged by the book and it was widely discussed only to be abused. But even that questionable popularity deserted James during the next few years. In novel after novel he tried his very best to turn the trick that would win him popularity but he always failed. Some of these novels are great works of art and are certain of a permanent place in American literature. But the public remained unconscious of them and bought by the hundreds of thousands books that will never have a chance to be known as classics.

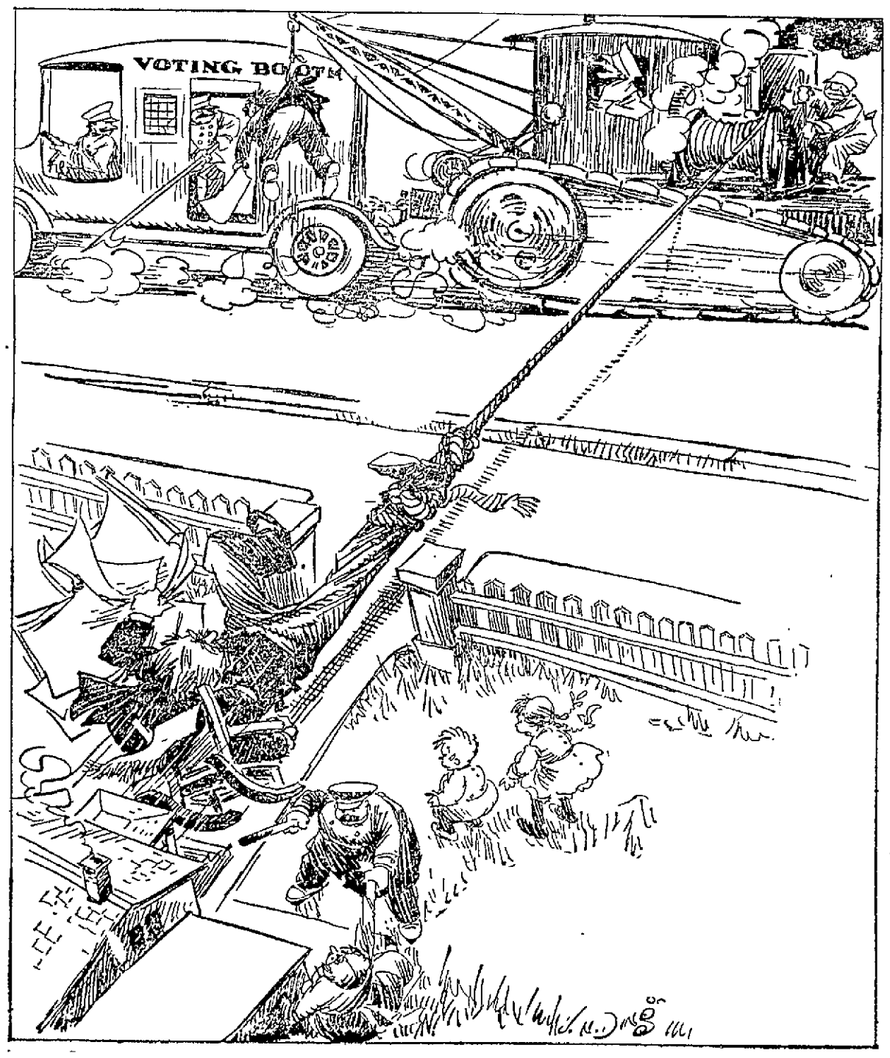

TURNED TO PLAYS

Finally almost in desperation Henry James decided to turn from novel writing to producing plays, hoping that in that way he might win a wide public. He was so earnest about it that he gave five years to it. But he was not a playwright and the five years of hard work to win popularity went for nothing.

And then at last he came to the conclusion that he was not and never would be a writer for the multitudes but that he would have to be satisfied with a limited audience all his life. He became reconciled to his fate and he settled down to write masterpieces in the only manner in which he could write. The crowd continued to ignore him, as it does today, and James decided, isely, to ignore the crowd and to get down on paper what there was in him to give to the world. The last tenty years of his life were passed in this spirit and they were probably the happiest years of his career, with the exception of the last year or two when the World war broke over him like a cosmic tragedy.

It is small wonder that the crowds did not take to James. He was out of vital touch with what the man who has to struggle for his bread is thinking about. His characters never need to work for a living, and his novels, exquisite studies though they are, nevertheless studies that are beyond the workaday world. Nothing else could have been expected than that his books should be ignored except by the sophisticated few.

It's a good thing to get back to my home. I feel it more and more every day, even if my immediate welcome included some annoyance

You, little Marquise, never having married, could not have had that alien feeling toward parents, sisters and brothers that must come to every girl after three years of married life. Of course, I perhaps have seen dad and mother and Alice very little since my marriage—so little of Alice, in fact, that she seemed almost a perfect stranger—a stranger that I should never attempt to make my friend if we were not of the same family.

"Blood is thicker than water," is another of those old saws that are only half truth You probably realize that, little Marquise, as well as I, and you also learned as most people learn, that a half truth is usually more dangerous than an outright lie

We flock to the rescue of some near relation, not because we love him so dearly, but because the overt act on his part reflects upon ourselves, our own name We are helping him because we do not want our own vanity hurt. I recognize the fact that I care very much more for Ruth Ellington than I do for my sister, and I could personally have the inclination to help Ruth much more quickly than I would Alice Yet, because Alice is my sister and anything that might happen to her would inevitably reflect upon me, I probably would help Alice before I would Ruth.

It all narrows down, little Marquise, to our own little sordid personal vanity.

Alice has been most disagreeable to me about the pearls Although I refused Karl, and she is going to marry him, and although my having the pearls was absolutely without any connivance on my part, and although she was the one that made it possible for me to receive them she evidently has persuaded herself that now that I know the facts of the case, I should give them back to her.

She said to me just before I left New York for home that Karl Whitney gathered those pearls together for his wife.

"But Karl Whitney expected me to be his wife,' I answered quietly This seemed to make her furious

"You needn't throw it up to me," she said, "that you refused him after allowing me to think from the time you were children together that you were just as much in love with him as he was with you and that I am his second choice"

This, of course, enraged me and I answered before I thought:

"I am not so sure that you are his second choice as that he is your first choice. You know my dear that Bernard Shaw says it is not the man who makes the choice and asks the girl to marry him, but the woman who makes the choice and persuades the man into thinking that it is he who is in reality choosing his wife"

"So you think Leslie Prescott that I inveigled Karl into marrying me."

Holmes and Miss Esther Miller at the Methodist parsonage, in honor of the fourth anniversary of the organization. A Halloween program has been arranged, and, as a special feature of the evening's pleasure, election returns will be received by radio Speeches and music will be arranged to be interspersed with election bulletins.

The I. B. club was organized four years ago under Dr. I. B. Wood, who was pastor of the church. Re-organization was designed to include young business and professional women of the congregation who would not be affiliated with other organizations. The girls discovered after a year, in which the club was purely a social one, that they could be much happier if they were working for other people And so, for three years, the club has supported a girl in a southern school, paying her tuition and contributing to her living expenses.

Helen Brayton, who was a former assistant at the church, was a member of the club at the time of her death. She was deeply interested in the education and growth of children and a Helen Brayton fund has been established in the organization, which is always kept up to $25, to be used to help families in need and to supply children with schoolbooks.

This year the club has joined the Social union as circle No. 11, and is now taking part in the life of the church as a whole as well as in individual work. There are no dues to be paid but last year the girls raised $500.

STUDENTS START CITYWIDE DRIVE TO GET OUT VOTE

Poster and Educational Campaign Is Carried on—Plan Parade Monday

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—In connection with the nationwide get-out-the-vote campaign, the civics classes of New London high school under the direction of Robert R. Stone, economics instructor, are carrying on a huge campaign of their own in the city to get all of the residents of voting age to the polls on Nov. 4.

To start things going, Mr. Stone procured 12 uptodate books, and put on an essay contest. The contest concerned the subject of citizenship and citizens' duties to the government, especialy in voting. The winners of this contest in order of rank were: Wilfred Zimmer, John Mulroy, Marjorie Parfitt, Delphis Soubert and Lucile Ladwig. Each of these five received his choice of the 12 books.

The civics classes then made a large supply of election posters. The best of these were placed in public places throughout the city. Then messages were sent by the students to all parents urging them to get out and vote. Next members of the civics classes gave talks to the pupils of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades, urging them to tell all the adults they might see to be sure and vote.

Then a straw vote was taken on Tuesday morning in all classes of the high school. Coolidge, LaFollette and Davis were voted upon, and the results were as follows: Coolidge 137; La Follette 123, and Davis 15. Coolidge lacked but one vote to gain a majority.

Data and statistics were gathered carefully tabulated and printed, and a copy was handed to each pupil in the high school. Chief among these facts was the one that only 53 per cent of Wisconsin voters are at the polls on election day, and that the other 43 per cent cast a silent vote in favor of abolishing the democracy of the nation.

Thursday noon the regular assembly period was taken up by talks on citizenship, accompanied by an original play.

Posters are now being sent out into the country for miles around and interest is being created in the rural schools.

A large bulletin board has been made by one class and erected in the hall of the high school and on it all newspaper articles, cartoons or any item of interest in the election are being placed and the hall is always crowded with students reading the reports.

A motion picture slide has been purchased and is being run in the theater daily, reminding the audiences that their chief duty as American citizens is to vote.

And lastly, a huge parade will be staged next Monday evening, Nov. 3, through the city streets. Banners and placards will be carried with all of the voting slogans in existence printed upon them.

STRENGTHEN LINE FOR H. S. BATTLE WITH FALLS TEAM

Weakness Shown in Kaukauna Game Results in Shifts in Saturday Lineup

New London — New London high school is expected to come back Saturday on the gridiron, when the Red and White machine meets Oconto Falls high school eleven at New London. Last week's defeat of 33 to 0 by Kaukauna has not dampened the enthusiasm of the school or the spirit of the team.

Coach Koten in a statement made this week said that the chief reason for New London's defeat on Saturday was the fact that the Red and White had been coached to play a perfect passing and end-run game and attention had been paid developing a strong backfield. The line however, had been neglected in the hope that New London's backfield could sweep its opponents off their feet. However this was not true on Saturday. Coach Smith of Kaukauna informed Coach Koten that everyone of the three previous Red and White games had been [illegible] Kaukauna with the result that the Orange and Black realized that New London had a weak line, and on Saturday, practically all of the Kaukauna plays were through the Red and White line, which up to then, had not been played very hard.

Coach Koten said that there were several players on the first team on trial. These have had long enough to make good but, some have failed to do so, and they were shifted back to the second team this week, in order to give several promising second stringers a chance. All of this week's practice has been devoted entirely to building up a line like a stone wall. New players have been substituted and the team has been changed considerably, so that the Red and White will enter Saturday's game with many changes in the lineup.

The Oconto Falls aggregation is light and fast, and has had lots of experience in playing larger teams than themselves.

FINE BUS DRIVERS FOR PARKING WRONG

The first arrests under the new parking ordinance are beginning to be made. The first two men arrested were bus drivers who were parking their busses in forbidden zones.

Parking within a certain number of feet from street corner had been forbidden by the police for some time, but they were without authority to make arrests since no ordinance covering that rule had been passed. The traffic ordinance, recently passed, gives the police authority to make arrests for violations of that rule.

The Kimberly bus, driven by William Redberg, 606 State-st. was parked over the line Thursday at the corner of College-ave and Morrison-st. The driver was arrested by Patrolman Edward Ratzman, and in municipal court was ordered to pay a fine of $1 plus $8.20 in costs. Judge A. M. Spencer imposed the same fine upon Clarence Batzler, 1025 Superior-st, a bus driver for the Appleton-Waupaca line, who had parked his bus at the corner of Appleton-st and College-ave. He too was arrested by Patrolman Ratzman.

WOMAN ASKS $5,000 BALM FOR INJURIES FROM CAR COMPANY

Oconomowoc Woman Says She Fell Off Street Car at Kaukauna

A suit for $5,000 damages, commenced by Mrs. Electa Hadley of Oconomowoc against the Wisconsin Traction, Heat, Light and Power company, opened in circuit court Friday morning, with Judge Edgar V. Werner presiding.

The plaintiff bases her claim for damages upon an accident which occurred near the business district of Kaukauna in the spring of 1923. She was a passenger of a Kaukauna-Appleton interurban car. In stepping off the platform of the vestibule, she said, the lights of the street car went out causing her to miss her step and fall out on the road.

Her knee was injured, and from this injury a disability known as a floating cartilage developed, she said. Dr. F. E. Donaldson of Kaukauna testifying for the plaintiff, declared it a permanent disability and said that if an operation were performed, the leg would become stiff. Her walking has been made difficult, it was testified. Dr. Donaldson was still on the witness stand Friday noon when the court declared a recess. The plaintiff's husband, Dr. D. A. Hadley, also has commenced an action against the company on the basis of the same accident.

RACES ENRICH ENGLISH CITY

By Associated Press

London—The famous St. Leger race which was run recently at Doncaster in the north of England, is not only a big sporting event but one which from first to last has added not less than $5,000,000 in profits to the municipality of Doncaster.

Every year the St. Leger, which is to the people of the north country in early autumn days what the Derby is to Londoners at Whitsundie, adds from $60,000 to $75,000 profits to Doncaster's receipts to lessen the taxpayers' burdens. This is because the Doncaster corporation owns the course.

Doncaster derives profit both directly and indirectly from the big race meet, which is the more drastic test of speed and staying power for the best three-year-olds of each season. Though never quite so large as the assemblage on Epsom Downs for Derby day, the St. Leger crowd usually exceeds 500,000.

When on the war path, the old plain Indians often boiled their food in the skin of a buffalo.

LARGE COMMITTEE WILL GREET FARM FOLK AT BANQUET

All Are Urged to Reserve Plates Early so They Will Receive Tickets

Rural folk who attend the get-together dinner of business men of city and farm at Eagle hall, Washington-st, at 7 o'clock Monday evening will be greeted by a large reception committee appointed by the general arrangements committee at a meeting and luncheon at Conway hotel Wednesday noon.

The big community dinner was announced for Elk hall but it was necessary to change the location to Eagle hall. Farmers who have not sent in reservations for places at the dinner are asked to telephone or notify the chamber of commerce, No. 2701, by Saturday afternoon. This is necessary because admission will be by ticket and the names must be on hand early so the tickets can be mailed out. In this way none who ask for places will be turned away when they arrive at the hall.

Both farmers and chamber of commerce members will be on the reception committee, with H. J. Ingold in charge. Each man on the committee has been asked to bring his wife to assist in receiving the women.

The chamber of commerce is anxious to have each farmer bring his wife to the dinner and also is urging Appleton businessmen to do the same.

Four men have been appointed on a committee to decorate the hall. They are H. L. Post, Walter Wieckert, Robert Wolter and Seymour Gmeiner.

Several 3-minute talks will be included in the program in addition to the main speeches. These will be given by George H. Fiedler of Seymour, chairman of the county board, Mayor John Goodland, Jr., of Appleton, A. C. Remley, president of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce, and probably a representative of Appleton Womans club.

An excellent message is expected from Burt Williams of Milwaukee, prominent booster of Wisconsin, whose subject is Tying City and Farm Together. Merriment will be furnished by John Garnes of Minneapolis, former Appleton man who has become noted as a humorist.

Boy Scouts Need Aid Of Persons Experienced In Trades, Professions

Finding enough persons who are skilled in trades, professions, academic or recreational subjects is the problem which faces P. O. Keicher, executive of Valley council, Boy Scouts of America, in the merit badge work of the organization. These persons are needed to act either as instructors of boy scouts or as examiners for the court of honor when a subject of their particular following is under consideration.

Each scout is encouraged to study certain practical subjects and to gain a working knowledge of certain trades crafts or scouting practices. Merit badges are confered when a boy passes a satisfactory test of his training and these awards determine his rank in the scout troops.

Boy scouts may attain to three ranks. The first is life scout and he must win merit badges in first aid, physical development or athletics, personal health, life saving or pioneering in order to be classed as such.

MAY SEEK RANK

Second in rank is the star scout, who is required to earn ten merit badges, five of which are the ones required of a life scout.

Eagle scout is the highest rank a boy can win. He must obtain 21 merit badges for this honor, among them first aid, life saving, personal health, public health, cooking, camping, civics, bird study pathfinding, pioneering, athletics or physical development and ten others.

Mr. Keicher finds that the court of honor appointed in any city usually is not informed on so wide a range of subjects as boy scout training provides. An examination therefore becomes theoretical instead of an attempt to find out whether the boy is practical in what he has learned. The executive therefore is asking that men volunteer to serve the court of honor when subjects of which they are the master come up for consideration. Sometimes their services are required for instruction but usually they are needed only at the call of the court of honor.

OOSTERHAUS VOLUNTEERS

A. G. Oosterhaus, principal of the First ward school, is the first to enroll as a merit badge assistant. He will instruct boys in agriculture and examine them at the end of their training. Any others who will assist are asked to telephone their names to the scout headquarters, No. 948.

This feature of scouting is considered especially valuable because it turns the thoughts of the boy toward the subjects in which he is interested. He therefore finds" himself earlier than the other boy and can determine his vocation and direct his schooling accordingly.

Other merit badge subjects not mentioned above are: Angling, archery, architecture, art, astronomy, automobiling, aviation, beekeeping, blacksmithing, bugling, business, botany, carpentry, chemistry, conservation, craftsmanship, cycling, dairying electricity, firemanship.

First aid to animals forestry gardening, handicraft, hiking, horsemanship, interpreting, leather working, machinery, marksmanship, masonry, mining, music, painting, photography, plumbing, poultry keeping, printing, safety, scholarship, sculpture, seamanship, signaling, stalking, surveying, swimming, tavidermy and wireless, the heavens in november lines for 3 c

Spooky Atmosphere Made By Dimmed Wavering Light

BY SISTER MARY

The girl who is planning a Hallowe'en party will find half the sucess of her party due to careful lighting arrangements.

The lights—unless a bright one is necessary for some particular game—should be dim and flickering. Candles best achieve this effect. Faint wavering light will immediately suggest the occult and unusual to Hallowe'en guests and will create a "spooky" atmosphere If electric lights are used, the shades should be lined with green tissue paper

Try green, grays, and an occasional gleam of orange for a color scheme. The grays will lend a vagueness and mystery that is most intriguing. A gray bat made of wire and cheesecloth suspended in such a way that he gently flutters at every opened door will be more effective than a black one And gray witches sailing on their broomsticks to wipe the cobwebs out of the sky are more mysterious than dead black witches

To make "cobwebs," paste long ravelings of fine silk on a piece of cardboard and hang it in some doorway through which each guest must pass

The cardboard and threads must be inconspicuous and the threads, of course, of different lengths that will suit the heights of the guests

Green frogs and lizards and snakes, all creatures chummy with witches an decoresses, might replace the usual bric-a-brac and drape themselves over backs of chairs or peep from dull sprays of leaves The frogs and snakes may be made of cheesecloth or cambric and stuffed with rags, straw or sawdust—dependent on where the reptile is to disport himself. For instance, a snake twined gracefully around the arm of a chair should be stuffed with rags, while a lizard investigating the edge of a table should gain his backbone from sawdust

Place a shock of corn—or at least some stalks of corn—in one corner of the living room or hall With the corn for her abode, a gypsy holds forth as fortune teller She may be either a "palmist" or a "medium"—gaining her knowledge from palms or communication with the spirit world. The decision rests with the hostess.

If apples are served during the evening, let it be understood that each apple to "snapped" and named—the girl's named for the a man of her acquaintance and the man's for a girl Then the seeds must be counted to the accompaniment of this verse

"One' I love "two" I love, "three" I love I say,
"Four" I love with all my heart,
"five" I cast away
"Six" he loves, "seven" she loves,
"Eight" they both love.
"Nine' he comes, "ten" he tarries,
"Eleven" he courts and "twelve" he marries

And of course the name of the apple is the "he" or "she" of the verse.

As for a Hallowe'en supper, why not serve stuffed apple salad, rye bread sandwiches, pumpkin pie with whipped cream and coffee? During the evening sweet cider might be served from a punch bowl

Use a large cabbage to hold fruit as a centerpiece on the dining table. Cut the heart from the cabbage, leaving a strong shell Fill it with grapes and apples and nuts The effect is pleasing

STUFFED APPLE SALAD

Twelve apples, ½ cup chopped raisins 1 cup chopped nuts, 4 tablespoons orange marmalade, 2 Neufchatel cheeses salad dressing.

Scoop out centers of apples, remove cores and chop apple. Combine raisins, nuts, marmalade, cheese, and apple with salad dressing to make moist. Fill apples with mixture and serve on the feathery, wild clematis if possible. If you can't get the clematis, any leaves or grasses will do.

A ROOM DECORATED FOR A HALLOWEEN PARTY

RYE BREAD SANDWICHES

Combine ripe olives and sweet red peppers, using half as much pepper as olive. Season with salt and put between slices of buttered rye bread.

PUMPKIN PIE

One cup stewed and sifted pumpkin, 2-3 cup brown sugar, 2 cups milk, 1 egg, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon cinnamon (optional).

Beat egg with sugar, salt and ginger. Add milk and pumpkin and mix well pastry and bake in a moderate oven until firm to the touch This amount of custard will fill a medium-sized pie dish.

The secret of a good pumpkin pie lies in the stewing of the pumpkin. Long, slow cooking is imperative. Serve the pie with slightly sweetened whipped cream.

Behnke is Speaker

Alden Behnke, son of Mr and Mrs H. J. Behnke, 437 Eldorado-st, will be one of the speakers at the State Older Boys conferernce under the auspices of the State Y. M C. A, at Eau Claire Nov 28 and 30. A highly developed program of discussions will feature the gatherings.

STATE CHAMBER CLUB MAY ASSIST BADGERS

Aid in the formation of the Greater Wisconsin association which was launched in Appleton last summer, will be given by a new organization called the National Association of State Chamber of Commerce Executives. This body was formed at Harrisburg, Pa., on Oct. 9, according to word received by Appleton Chamber and will aim to establish a state chamber of commerce in every state in the union. Stanley Bullard of Bridgeport, Conn., is president.

Hopes Mothers of Sickly Boys Will Read This

My boy was run down — and about skin and bones, and no appetite, writes Mrs. Baker of Boston.

NOW STURDY AND STRONG

O'Brien Boy Also Gained 11½ Pounds in About 9 Weeks

"I am writing you in the hopes that other Mothers will read this voluntary testimonial regarding McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. My boy, Emanuel, was run down completely, just about skin and bones; also irritable and with no appetite."

"I noted a wonderful improvement in him while taking your tablets and purchased three more boxes. His appetite picked up, and he is now sturdy and strong. A cheerful youngster and a happy mother want to thank you."

"You may print this at any time or anywhere you wish."

Very respectfully,
(Signed) Mrs. Albert E. Baker,
33 Ridgwood St., Boston, Mass.

As a body builder, an appetite creator, and to make weak, skinny boys and girls sturdy, strong and full of energy there is nothing like Cod Liver Oil—any physician will tell you that.

But it's vile, horrible stuff to take, and is apt to upset any stomach, so now doctors are prescribing, and wise parents are buying, McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets — sugar coated and as easy to take as candy.

The son of Georg G. O'Brien of Mahwah, N. J., was thin and pale and did not get enough nourishment from his food. In a little over two months he gained eleven and one-half pounds, and feels and looks one hundred per cent better.

Mothers, if any of your children are weak, thin or puny, give them these tablets, as directed for 30 days, and watch them gain flesh and health from day to day—they seldom fail—but if the unusual should happen and you are not supremely satisfied with results—your druggist will return your money.

Be sure—always—to get the original and genuine McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—60 tablets 60 cents, at Schlintz Bros., Downer's Drug Store or any druggist in America. adv.

Material-Tailoring-Design
The Three Elements That Set
The Price of "Ready-to-Wear"

WHEN one buys Ready-to-Wear, she should consider the quality of the fabrics, the quality of the tailoring, and the smartness of design.

Sometimes one will find two pieces of merchandise, that in outward appearances are similar, but one is much lower in price than the other. The one lower in price usually is a copy of the higher priced garment. The material is not as good and the tailoring is work of unskilled craftsmen. This kind of economy does not pay.

At Fleischner's every garment is exclusive, every garment is made by the world's best garment makers. Many of them are bound to be copied, (it is a tribute to their quality) and some of the copies may reach Appleton, but remember they cannot be the same garment.

C. C. BOARD WILL ASK CALUMET-CO TO BAN CARNIVALS

Personal Visit Probably Will Be Made to Board to Present Situation

Calumet-co board will be petitioned by the chamber of commerce and perhaps be visited personally by a delegation when it meets this fall in an effort to secure a ban on carnivals, according to plans made by the board of directors of the chamber at the biweely meeting Wednesday evening. Several cooperative projects also were discussed and A. C Remley, president was appointed delegate to the north central district meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at Indianapolis Nov. 17 and 18.

Officials of the town of Harrison have been asked to refuse carnivals a license and the Calumet-co board now will be petitioned along the same lines. The city of Appleton and town of Menasha both have agreed to refuse licenses but Appleton still has the carnivals because the town of Harrison permits them to locate just outside the south city limits nullifying the fight that has been made against them.

The chamber of commerce will offer its assistance to the city of Appleton in its negotiations to obtain a suitable road south from the Cherry-st bridge to Menasha-rd. Any cooperation the city needs will be given. The city has been obliged to establish a temporary route due to lack of support from Winnebago-co in obtaining the needed land.

Copies of the recent address here by Dr. Augustus Dyer will be supplied chamber of commerce members who wish them, the board was informed.

No action was taken on sending a delegate to the sixth annual convention of Mississippi Valley association at Evansville, Ind.

DIGEST POLL GIVES COOLIDGE ELECTION

Wisconsin Only State That Is Sure to Go for Badger Senator

President Coolidge seems certain to receive more than enough electoral votes to retain his office for another term on the basis of the final returns of The Literary Digest's non-partisan national poll which will appear in tomorrow's issue of that periodical.

Of the grand total of 2,386,052 ballots recorded, Coolidge receives 1,348,033 votes La Follette 508 516, and Davis, 505 410. The balance of 24 093 votes are scattered among the other five regular candidates.

Wisconsin, casting 13 electoral votes, is the only State which affords votes, is the only state which accords Senator La Follette a plurality in The Digest poll The States credited to Mr Davis include Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas, representing a total electoral vote of 139.

But according to The Digest's figures Senator LaFollette has evidenced considerable strength in California, Nevada, North Dakota, and South Dakota, which if he gains on Election Day would increase his electoral votes to a total of 39.

The Digest states that in pursuing this policy of giving the benefit of doubtful States to a vigorous contender for leadership in the State, Mr. Davis might be credited with Oklahoma, West Virginia, and Maryland, which would increase his electoral poll 26 votes, making him a total of 165.

Granting the Democratic and Progressive candidates these States, where President Coolidge is leading by a narrow plurality, it would leave the President 327 electoral votes, with 266 required for election to the executive chair.

ON THE SCREEN

AT THE ELITE
Guaranteed Gloom-Chaser

"Why Worry," the title of Harold Lloyd's newest Pathecomedy production to make the world a merrier place to live in, gives a splendid idea of just the type of picture it is.

When he made "Saftey Last," Lloyd sought to produce a picture that would shake the spine with thrills and laughter. How successful he was in his efforts, picture followers know by this time. The picture has become established as the greatest thriller in screen annals.

In "Why Worry," Lloyd set out to make a light farce, with a little romance and plenty of action. Again he has triumphed, for "Why Worry" is a laugh from start to finish. The chances are that there are more "gag" laughs in this attraction than in any picture Lloyd ever made. There is little that is serious in the production. It is little that is serious in the pro It is just what the comedian aimed for—a laugh picture.

The story is laid in a romance atmosphere, with carefree senors and dancing senoritas, fighting hombres and pompous generals. Throughout this farce runs a little vein of satire—a jibe here and there at the blood-curdling pictures of South American revolutions.

There have been many pictures built around the custom and habit of our neighboring republics in tossing their Presidente out of office very forcibly and very frequently, but none that contains the speed, the pep, the laughs and romance of "Why Worry." At the Elite Theatre Today and Saturday.

BIG SUPPORTING CAST FOR TEARLE IN "THE FIGHTER"

Conway Tearle in a Selznick Picture, "The Fighter," at the New Bijou theatre today and Saturday is a powerful dramatic piece which had its inception in story form by Albert Payson Terhune and true to both star's and author's ability the screen piece has resulted in an entertainment that is thoroughly satisfying.

As Caleb Conover, powerful, stern, unflinching fighter, who never falters before the foe, Conway Tearle has a characterization that fits him like the proverbial glove. Caleb Conover is a fighter of parts, being both handy with hands and feet, but the bulk of the hero's fighting is done not with his brawn, but with brain and will, and the picture instead of a potpourri of things pugnacious, really is a drama of big business, society and love.

Briefly, the story deals with a big man of big business who unknowingly is in love with his young ward. The ward likewise is in the same dilemma and this situation suddenly opens up a new avenue of attack for Conover's enemies who, until then, had found his armor impregnable. The manner in which the fighter thwarts his enemies and wins the girl he loves reveals a story both absorbing and exciting.

Winifred Westover is the girl in the case and Arthur Houseman gives a creditable performance as the "heavy." Others in the cast are Arthur Houseman, Ernest Lawton, Warren Cook and Jack Stewart

We Will Allow You

$7.50 for Your Old Hand Wringer or Hand Washer, $10 for Your Old Water Power Washer, $15 for Your Electric Washer — of any make or type, on the new 1925 model of the

1900 Cataract Washer

The safest and easiest way to wash the most clothes cleanest in the least time.

With the
New Safety Wringer and Double Gas Heater
The Greatest Combination of All Time

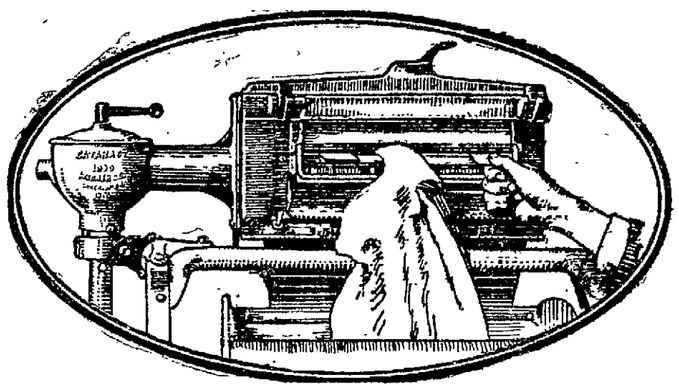

First In Principle

A washer that cleans without the aid of moving parts in the tub—which positively eliminates wear on the clothes and extra work for the woman in lifting out and cleaning these parts.

First In Mechanism

—only three gears—all working in splash oil system.

The New Safety Wringer

is another exclusive 1900 invention, really it is so far superior to the old wringers there is no comparison, and it is important because it is used three times to each tub ofclothes. Just remember when buying a washer with these new fangled metal wringers—

Put Your Hand Between The Opened Rolls On Any Other Wringer and

—see if you have enough clearance, then see this new safety wringer on the 1900 Cataract, you know what we mean. Feel the rubber rolls—another test. The rolls stop instantly when the release is tripped—look at any other wringer. Safe! Yes, it is more than that. Look at the work it does—takes a big double blanket without changing the tension. You can't do that with any other wringer.

See it First. Decide for yourself.

The Double Gas Burner

—found only on the Cataract, another feature that in itself is a great labor saver. We gave away the first thousand to introduce them, now they are sold with most of our washers, where city gas is available. Of the thousands in use, we have never had to replace a tub after four years of actual service. Don't let anyone tell you they are not right—we know the gas burner is right and we are willing to demonstrate it.

In Fact A FREE Trial

during this period will convince you. So simply Phone 1005 or Neenah 16-W. Let us show you that the tubs have extra capacity for, unless you have made a thorough investigation of electric washers, you may not realize that they differ greatly in size, and that with the Double Gas Burner one process of washing is eliminated. BEFORE YOU DO ANOTHER WASH, Do This, ask for a 1900 Cataract to do it. No obligation at all. Undisputably the leaders in Milwaukee in sales, as well as Racine and Kenosha, the second and third largest cities in the State—and it has held the lead for almost Four Years, and as Rube Waddell, the famous baseball pitcher, once said: "You gotta be good to stay three years in the big league."

Lawrence Squad Plans To Wipe Out Sting Of Ripon Tie On Saturday

Carroll Looked Upon as Chief Rival of Blues in Race for Championship of Little Five

With their virtual defeat at the hands of Ripon rankling under their skins, Lawrence gridders Friday afternoon were going through the final workout of the hardest week in the season to prepare for their clash with Carroll college of Waukesha Saturday afternoon. Carroll is doped as the Blues' strongest rival in the chase after the Little Five title, and scouts who watched the Presbyterians swamp the Chicago Y. M. C. A. last week predicted a tollsome afternoon for the Lawrentians.

Coach Mark Catlin locked the gates of Lawrence field every day this week and began preparing his charges to meet an attack consisting chiefly of end runs and forward passes. The Blues were particularly weak in these departments and needed reinforcement badly. The return of four veterans, Stoll, Kiessling, Cooke and Olfson, after a week's rest, promised to strengthen the squad considerably, and the addition of several new and puzzling plays to their bag of tricks improved their chances of upsetting the Waukesha invaders.

New bleachers have been erected on the Lawrence field in preparation for one of the largest crowds of the year, and tickets which were on sale at Roemer and Bellings drug store and at the Alexander gymnasium were going fast.

Catlin planned to start practically the same men Saturday who started against Iowa two weeks ago.

ORANGE GRIDDERS INVADE KAUKAUNA FOR GRID BATTLE

Electric City Declares Half Holiday on Occasion of Annual Fracas

Appleton high school Friday sent a large delegation of rooters with its grid squad to Kaukauna where the Orange youngsters expected a hard battle with their ancient enemies. While the contest has no bearing on Valley conference standings great interest is attached to it because of the intense rivalry between the two cities in all branches of sport and because Bill Smith, former Lawrence star, is coaching the Kaukauna eleven.

For the first time in many years the Electric City schoolers have a chance to hold Appleton to something like an even score, according to reports. Their squad is heavier than ever before and judging from early games, Smith's methods are meeting with great success. While Kaukauna did not expect to win the game or even tie the score, the Orange squad was looking for a hard fight, and many fans who have seen both squads in action were prepared to see the unexpected happen.

Shops and factories in the Electric City were closed Friday afternoon in honor of the occasion, and Kaukauna citizens made a gala occasion of the meeting.

HAWKEYES DIRECT ATTENTION TO RED GRANGE SATURDAY

Zuppke's Squad Meets Eleven of His Former Pupil Inwerson, at Urbana

Chicago—Supporters of Iowa Friday murmured a prayer that some how "Red" Grange, Illinois "point-a-minute-team in himself," will not find the hole in the Hawkeye line which Fleckenstein left with a broken shoulder, in Saturday's fight for the Western conference crown at Urbana.

The hopes were bouyed up by word from the Illini camp that Wallie McIlwain, an important cog in the interference for the fleet Grange, may be out with an injured hand and the ace may be slightly handicapped with a cold.

Coach Bert Ingwersen led a grimly determined Hawkeye squad into Urbana Friday against the proteges of his former mentor, Bob Zuppke. The Iowans were primed particularly for Grange, once a pupil of Ingwersen, when he coached the Illini freshmen Both teams held final drills in the country near Urbana Friday.

Michigan and Minnesota were ready to come to grips at Minneapolis. With the Wolverines was the traditional "little brown jug," possession of which has gone to the victor of the Wolverine Gopher game since 1903.

Coach Stagg of Chicago had a well developed passing game prepared for Purdue here Saturday.

The Indiana Jinx officially interred in effigy by Northwestern's homecoming celebrants, the Purple had its entertainment prepared for the Hoosiers. Indiana brought two teams to Evanston.

Aside from the conference contests, intersectional interest centered on final preparations of Notre Dame for Georgia Tech at South Bend.

Wisconsin had no game scheduled Saturday and confined its week end practice to next week's tilt with Notre Dame, and Ohio State expected only mediocre opposition from Wooster, a non-conference team.

GUBERNATORIAL SEEKER WORKS CAMPAIGN HERE

Farrand K. Shuttleworth of Madison, Independent Republican candidate for governor, was in Appleton Wednesday in the interests of his campaign. Instead of a speechmaking tour, he is making a personal canvass of the entire field. Mr. Shuttleworth declares that he is the only Coolidge Republican candidate for governor on the ticket. He has been a practicing attorney in Madison for the last 33 years, and this is the first time he has ever sought political office.

Portland, Ore.—Jimmy Delaney of St. Paul, light heavyweight, won a ten-round decision over Frank Farmer, Tacoma.

St. Paul, Minn.—Jock Malone, St. Paul middleweight, was matched to meet Morrie Schlaifer, Omaha, in ten rounds in St. Paul, Nov. 10.

Injured

ADAM WALSH

Injuries received in the West Point game may deprive Notre Dame of the services of Captain Adam Walsh for several weeks.

Walsh was not in the best of shape when he entered the Army game. He was suffering from a broken bone in the left hand. He played despite the orders of the Notre Dame trainer.

In the West Point game he suffered two broken bones in the right hand.

Since Walsh is the Notre Dame center and must do all the passing, two broken hands make him useless.

FORMER WISCONSIN GRID STARS WILL RETURN ON NOV. 15

Phil King, Championship Coach of 1912, Will Be Guest of Honor

Madison—Wisconsin football stars of the last two decades, wearers of the Cardinal when championship teams fought on Randall field, will return to Madison Nov. 15, for the annual homecoming battle with the University of Iowa.

Phil King coach of the championship 1912 conference eleven, will be the guest of honor at homecoming, according to the officials of the athletic department. Invitations also have been issued to members of the team to return to their Alma Mater.

King will be feted at a banquet in Milwaukee the Thursday before the game by the Milwaukee "W" club. Judge John "Ikey" Karel, former Badger star, will be one of the main speakers at the banquet.

On Friday King will be in Madison where he will be entertained by the Madison "W" organization. He will speak at an open air mass meeting Friday night.

Elaborate plans are being completed to make the event one of the features of homecoming. King will speak from the famous "Red Wagon" which will be placed on the steps of the historical library. Amplifiers will be installed so that the thousands that attend may hear distinctly. Movies will also be taken.

It is expected that scores of former football "W" men will be in Madison for the game. Special seats have been reserved for them and between halves there will be a reception on the field by King for all members of former Wisconsin teams.

PIGSKIN PRIMER

Is there any definite time set as the length of a football period?

The length of a football game is 60 minutes, divided into four periods of 15 minutes each. It is shortened by mutual agreement between the coach or captain of the contesting teams.

What is meant by snapping the ball.

Snapping the ball is putting it back from its position on the ground with one quick and continuous motion of the hand or hands, the ball actually leaving the hands on this motion. The center, when he snaps the ball back, must hold it with its long axis at right angles to the line of scrimmage.

How many players must be on the line of scrimmage to make a play legal?

When the ball is put in play by a scrimmage, at least seven players of the side holding the ball should be on the line of scrimmage.

Cleveland, O.—Chris Jordan, claimant of the worlds middleweight wrestling title, won in straight falls over Ray Carpenter of Lancaster, O.

Cleveland, O.—Larry Gardner, veteran American league infielder, was signed as player-manager of the Dallas Texas league club.

Stars Of Gridirons Failures On Diamond

Does football jinx the college baseball star?

Major league scouts are just about convinced that such is the case.

If the scout is favorably impressed by a certain college ball player, he at once makes inquiries whether he plays football.

An affirmative reply immediately causes him to lost much interest in said athlete.

Only a limited few of the college athletes who have starred on the gridiron as well as the diamond have made good in big league ball.

It seems that football takes something out of the athlete as a ball player. The grid game has a tendency to slow him up in more ways than one.

FOOTBALL INJURIES COSTLY

The chance of injury is also great. Many college players come to the major bearing the marks of their football careers. Often these injuries make ordinary players out of men who would have starred.

Castner, one of the greatest athletes ever turned out at Notre Dame, failed as a big league pitcher with the Chicago White Sox.

Only a year ago in talking with Coach Rockne of Notre Dame he paid tribute to Castner.

"He was a great an athlete as George Gripp, who I regarded as the best man I ever coached, but lacked Gripp's staying powers. Castner was brittle, Gripp an iron man."

MANY GRID STARS FAIL

Castner, a great college pitcher never had a chance as a big leaguer. He pitched as if shoulder-bound, no doubt the penalty of football injuries.

Michigan's last two centers were Ernie Vick and Jack Blott, both remarkable players, All-America selections.

Versatile athletes, they went big on the diamond as well as gridiron. Both starred as catchers. Branch Rickey took Vick to St. Louis, while Cincinnati signed Blott.

Vick has spent much of his time since Rickey signed him playing with the minor leagues of a higher classification. No doubt he is still the property of St. Louis.

Blott, a great thrower in college, broke his shoulder blade in football and was still suffering from the injury when he reported to Cincinnati. It is said Detroit passed him up because of this.

FOOTBALL REAL JINX

At the world series I had a talk with Jack Hendricks, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who says Blott has entirely recovered and is throwing as well as ever. Hendricks looks for him to be a star.

Glenn Killinger, an All-American football player, couldn't make the grade in the majors. Hinkie Haines and Mike Gozella failed with the Yankees.

Hoge Workman, one of the greatest backfield players ever turned out in the Big Ten, met with just ordinary success as a pitcher with the Boston Red Sox.

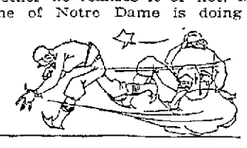

A football reputation is quite a handicap to the college athlete who aspires to shine in big league baseball. A real jinx.

WINNERS OF LAST YEAR ARE DOPED TO COP IN EAST

Yale Which Meets Army in Feature Tilt Staged Winning Rally in 1923

By Associated Press

New York—Favorites in the more important eastern football games of Saturday were in most cases winners in contests with the same opponents last year. Yale, whic hmeets Army in one of the feature games of the day, won a 31 to 10 victory over the cadets in the Bowl last season after West Point had taken the first half. It was in the Army game that the great 1923 Eli team found itself and the battle this year is regarded as the gauge for an eleven which had loose parts rattling in its games so far.

LaFayette defeated Pennsylvania, 8 to 6, last season and has about that paper edge in the forecasts for Saturday.

The meeting of old rivals at Ithaca where Cornell and Columbia clash, and at Annapolis where Penn State meets the Navy, have been deadened to an extent by unusual events. The death of Percy Haughton, Columbia coach, was at first thought sufficient reason for cancelling the Cornell contest, but it will be played with the elimination of all festivities.

Columbia had reached its top form against Williams last week. Cornell has had two weeks in retirement after its two defeats and no one knows what will come out of Ithaca.

Dartmouth and Brown at Hanover will continue the 16 to 14 argument which the Green won last year. Dartmouth with a moral decision over Yale and a 6 to 0 win over Harvard, is favored to beat the Bruins who lost to Chicago but almost upset Eli.

Syracuse defeated Pitt, 3 to 0, last season, and should win by a bigger margin this year.

Princeton, Harvard, Rutgers and Lehigh will have comparatively easy opponents.

HARRIS ADMITS CHAMPIONS LACK RESERVE POWER

Washington Regulars as Good as Any in League, Manager Claims

Washington — Manager Stanley Harris of the world champs is willing to stand pat on his club except for reserve strength. He says:

"My regulars are as good as any team in the league. I do not know a single spot where the first stringers could be bettered.

"The world series games did prove the weakness of my reserve strength, particularly in the infield.

"The developing of capable substitutes will be my biggest task for the coming season."

Had the Washington club suffered the loss of Muddy Ruel last year for any length of time, the team would have probably gone to pieces.

Ruel did practically all the catching and lost 20 pounds in doing it. He can't be asked to repeat next year.

A veteran catcher, capable of going good about 40 games, would be an ideal addition to the Nations. Such a backstop would enable Ruel to take an occasional rest.

LAWRENCE CROSS COUNTRY SQUADS RACE SATURDAY

Blue Harriers Engage in First Competition Before Carroll Game

Lawrence cross country runners will engage in their first competitive runs before the Carroll football game here Saturday. The candidates have been divided into two squads, the Blues and the Whites, and these will race over the three mile course starting at the Carnegie library and finishing before the grand stand on Lawrence field. They will be started at 1:30 so that fans who come to see the Carroll-Lawrence contests will be able to see the finish of the race if they care to arrive early.

Purvis has been chosen captain of the Blues while Larson leads the Whites. Kingsbury, Bredlow, Froehe and Tuttle will run with Purvis, while Larson's squad is composed of Locklin, Sorenson, Snider and Carey. The men were chosen with a view to making the competition as even as possible, and it is expected that Purvis, Locklin, Sorenson and Snider will finish pretty well bunched. This quartet has been sticking together in practice runs and the four are evenly matched.

Arthur P. Denney plans to choose the four best men in the initial event to run at Milwaukee in a meet with Marquete later in the season.

BADGERS EXPECT RECORD GATE AT GAME WITH IOWA

Ticket Sales Reach Unprecedented Proportions Despite Recent Defeat

Madison—That the student body of the University of Wisconsin has not lost faith in the Badger football team, despite the disastrous defeat at Michigan last week, has been shown this week in the sale of tickets to the students for the Iowa game. On the first day of the sale the students purchased 5,119 tickets, the largest single day's sale in the history of football at Wisconsin, and the heavy sale has continued daily since until it is now assured that more students witness the Iowa game than ever attended any game at Wisconsin.

The Badger students did not expect a championship team this year. The did not even hope for it. They realized early that Coach Ryan had a team of inexperienced although very promising men, and that championship teams are not made in one season. Only eight of the forty men on the varsity squad this year were members of the squad last year and eleven men who played in the Michigan game were playing their first year of conference football.

On the other hand, Michigan has thirteen letter men, Minnesota and Iowa each fourteen, while Wisconsin has but six, four of them at center and guard, one at end and the other, Capt. Harris, in the backfield. Close followers of football who witnessed both Minnesota and Michigan games declare that it was the inexperience of the Badger players that cost them the game, and that Michigan, despite the 21 to 0 score is not that much better than Wisconsin.

Michigan had derived a world of experience in its slaughter at the hands of Illinois the week before, and smarting under the sting of that defeat played the best game it has played in a long time against the Badgers, while the Wisconsin team was demoralized.

That the Badgers will come back in the game against Notre Dame next week is the belief of the student body, and although additional bleachers are being constructed to care for an enormous crowd, it is believed the 3,000 seats which will be placed on open sale here Tuesday will be taken long before the game.

More than 20,000 tickets to the game were sent out under registered mail from the Madison postoffice Friday, while the students will receive nearly 7,500 early next week and with the 5,000 sold at Notre Dame a record crowd is assured.

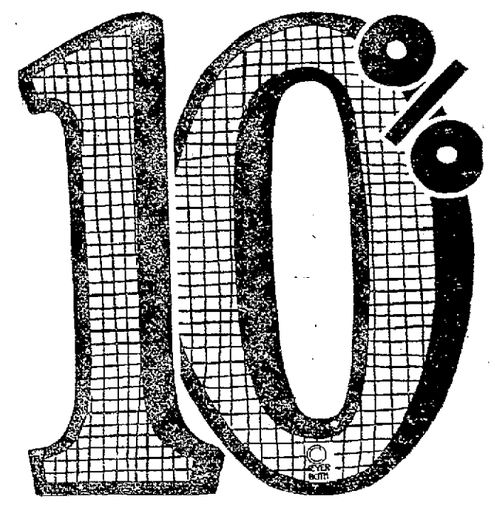

WISCONSIN COMMISSION BARS WALKER-O'HARA GO

Chicago—A ten round bout between Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, and Joe O'Hara of Chicago, scheduled for next Wednesday in Milwaukee, has been called off by order of the Wisconsin Boxing commission. Walter H. Liginger of the commission saw O'Hara train here recently and asserted he was not a "fit opponent for Walker," according to Jack O'Keefe, O'Hara's manager.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Homer Smith of Kalamazoo and Jack Burke, Pittsburg, heavyweights, fought a ten-round draw.

IT'S a common experience of home cooks to have to throw away their cookies after the third day—they age so fast.
But Quality Cookies are different; they are made with exactly the right proportions of wheat, butter, lard, milk, honey, etc., and are baked to a delightful crispness.
They have all the savoriness of fresh baked cookies, long after home cookies have become stale and unpalatable.

"The Nervous Wreck"

By E. J. Rath

Copyright 1924 by NEA Service Inc.

The Wreck had rolled Denver over on his face and was tying his hands behind his back. He worked quickly and roughly, but he made the job thorough. Then he reached for the cord that Sally held and began tying the big creature's ankles.

"But look what it did for us," said the Wreck, as the storm shrieked at them again

"Is he hurt much?"

The Wreck began exploring the skull of his victim.

"I can't even find blood," he said "He had a hat on when I hit him. There's a big welt on top of his head. When he comes to he'll think he was struck by lightning."

"You don't think he's dead, Henry?"

"No!" answered the Wreck scornfully. "I can feel him breathing. Come on, now We'd better get out of this."

He picked up Denver's rifle, examined the breech, then threw it across his shoulder. Sally bent over the loose figure and stared at it curiously

"We all have our weak spots," she said, solemnly. "I'm honestly sorry for him."

"We did him a kindness," averred the Wreck "He won't worry about the rest of the storm. Come on!"

"Where?"

"We're going to get the car, of course."

He seized her hand and they plunged into the brush that surrounded the small clearing where the camp lay. As they did so, the rain came. It did not begin gently, with widely scattered drops, but came in an abrupt rush, with a roar that resembled the voice of a cataract Even through the trees it beat down on them from the darkness, carried on the wings of a squall that fairly howled. Almost as abruptly the electric phase passed, so that now the flashes were fewer and dimmer.

They blundered forward, clinging to each other. They stumbled over roots and vines, floundered blindly into trees forced their way through underbrush that seemed to claw at them. Both were drenched to the skin and gasping for breath before they had gone a hundred yards.

"Seems to me we've gone far enough," panted Sally. "It was only a little way from camp."

"It's right around here somewhere," said the Wreck. "Come on."

He dragged her forward again.

"If we could get some more lightning we could see something," she complained.

"We'll find it," he promised, confidently.

But they had not found the flivver in five minutes, or ten, although they steadily groped their way through the dripping woods, trying to shield their faces against the beating rain.

"We've been going uphill too much," said Sally, who had a sharp misgiving concerning their quest. "The ground was almost level between the flivver and the camp."

"Then we'll go downhill some," declared the wreck.

They went downhill for awhile, but it was still a blind scramble through the trees and underbrush, with no touch of a flivver to greet their outstretched hands It was very dark. They could hear distant thunder, but the lightning they could not see. And it rained as though determined never to stop.

"I don't see that that rifle is doing you any good," observed Sally, as they paused to rest. "It's only so much more to carry"

"We may need it," he said stubbornly.

Half an hour passed. The rain was lessening, although the fact made little difference; neither Sally, nor the Wreck, nor the woods could get any wetter.

"I'm afraid," she said, "that we started in the wrong direction when we left the camp."

"We'll go back to the camp and start over again."

"But you'll never find the camp now, Henry."

"Sure."

There was no use in arguing or trying to discourage him, and Sally knew they might better be moving than standing still, so she suffered hereself to be led on another journey through the darkness. The Wreck stumbled onward, scorning difficul- seemed to be tireless He plodded and ties picking himself up whenever he fell, clinging to the rifle, and doing it all with an amazing optimism and even a show of patience.

"Any time you want to rest, just holler," he advised.

Sally promised that she would, but she kept going.

They did not find the camp. Even if they passed within a few yards of it the chances were against discovery, for long ago, Sally knew, the rain must have obliterated the last vestige of glowing embers But the Wreck searched stubbornly for hours, it seemed. He would not admit that he was lost, although Sally would have conceded it without hesitation He seemed to proceed on the theory that groping through the woods was like walking the streets of Pittsburg —even if you happened to be in a strange neighborhood you would locate your street at last.

"Let's rest awhile," he suggested.

Sally was willing. Her skirt was heavy with moisture and her legs were tired. They found a fallen tree and sat for a long time, during which the moon came out It did not give them much light, but it had a cheerful aspect. They did not talk much She felt that the Wreck was chagrined about their failure to find the flivver and did not refer to it. Nor did she even speculate on what they were going to do next although it seemed to her that their plight was more unfavorable than ever

"We ought to be getting some daylight in an hour or so," she said

He agreed with her and suggested that they walk again There seemed to be no end to the woods How far they traveled, or in what direction Sally had not the smallest idea. She felt quite helpless. The one thing that gave her a measure of confi- ence was the demeanor of the Wreck He was undaunted; everything would be all right as soon as it got light enough to see what they were doing.

They were resting again when a noise made by something that moved stirred them both to alertness. It was not far distant, and Sally held her breath as she clung to the Wreck's fingers. Several times the noise was repeated; it was as if some heavy body were forcing its way through the brush.

"Maybe it's one of the gang," she whispered.

"Maybe. Do they have bears here?"

"Not many, I reckon. I never saw one."

"You stay here," he said. "I'm going to see what it is"

"No."

"I've got a rifle, haven't I"

"I don't care. You'd better stay here."

They heard the noise again.

"I'm going," said the Wreck. "Sit still."

"Henry."

He was gone, trying to be stealthy about it, but making a din as he plunged forward into the gloom. Sally gritted her teeth and followed him. What was he blundering into now?

She was several yards behind him when she heard a scuffle, then a muffled exclamation from the Wreck Something was plunging around in the brush ahead of her.

"Henry!" she called sharply. "Henry"

Then his excited voice floated back to her.

"I've got hold of a horse," he cried "What'll I do with it?"

"A horse!"

"Yes, a horse!"

"Hang on to it, I'm coming."

She went forward at a run, tripped fell headlong, picked herself up and resumed.

"He's rearing around," complained the voice of the Wreck. "The damn fool, he's just—"

"Well, you hang onto him," said Sally grimly. "I'll be there in a second. Darn these woods, anyhow."

CHAPTER XXI

The Sheriff's Horse

When she reached him, the Wreck was still struggling with a dark shape that was making desperate efforts to back out of the encounter.

"Let me see," said Sally, pushing herself to the front. "What are you holding him by, anyhow" Why, he's bridled."

It had not occurred to the Wreck that a horse roaming the woods at night did not usually wear a bridle, but to Sally, who knew about things, it was an oddity

"Easy now, boy." She had hold of the bridle and was talking in a soothing, professional tone. The effect of her voice and her practiced hand was almost immediate. "That's it; gentle, now. And who turned you loose in the woods?"

An instant later she made a second discovery.

"Saddled, too! That's queer. He's broken loose from some place. I suppose the storm scared him. There now, boy, steady. Well, can you beat it? Saddled and bridled, all ready to hand."

She stroked the animal's neck, patted his shoulder and talked gently to him Presently he responded with a nuzzling against her arm, and then she knew she had him.

"We can't be far from the camp, Henry. He must belong to Nosey, or one of that crowd, of course. A horse might get frightened in a storm like that, but he wouldn't run very far in the woods. Listen!"

The Wreck had not heard anything, but Sally's quick ear caught a familiar sound.

QUEEN LACKS USE FOR LATE KING'S STICKS

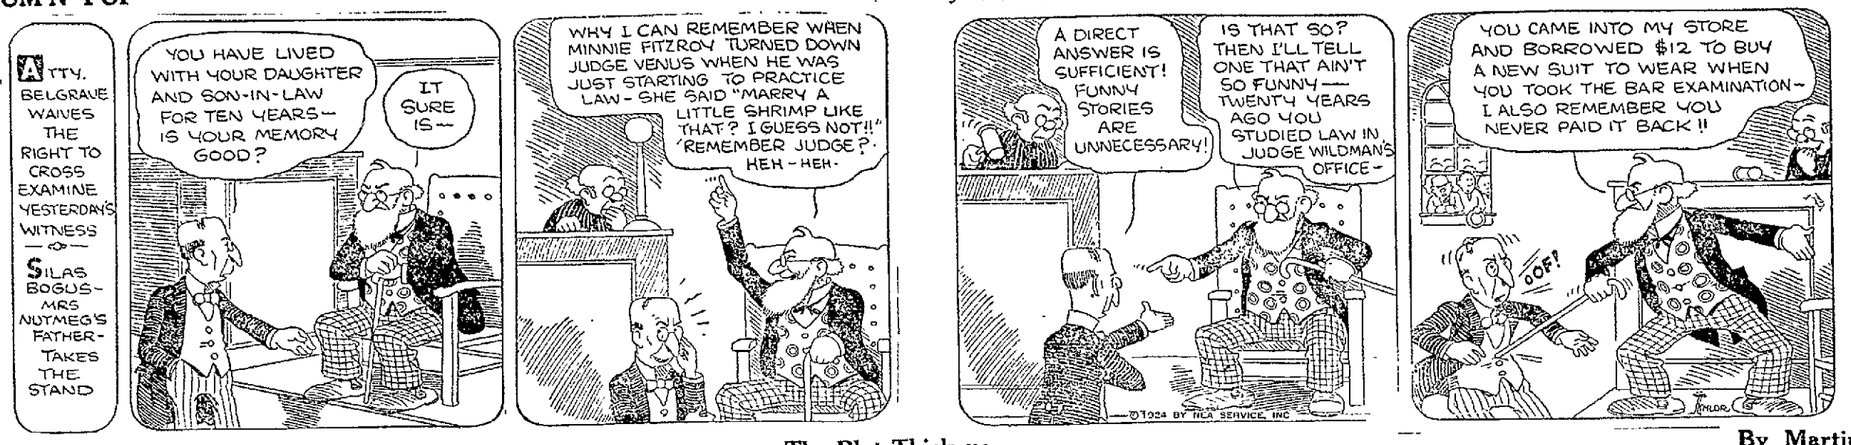

By Associated Press

London—There is some speculation as to what Queen Alexandra will do with a collection of the late King Edward's walking canes, when she returns to Marlborough House. A large rack contains the favorite canes used by the king, which typify the story of the walking stick in the last century. He was rarely seen without one, and always brought back a few from his many visits abroad.

Riverview Sanatorium Board Requests Action on Claim for Money

A letter has been sent to the state board of control at Madison by Dr C. D. Boyd, secretary of the board of trustees and acting superintendent of Riverside Sanatorium of Outagamie co, asking settlement of a claim against the state of Wisconsin for $4,779 99 for money due from other counties for the care of their patients and for state aid as provided in the statutes.

The claim, which was first made on Nov 9, 1923, was the result of an audit by Reilly, Penner and Benton certified public accountants and is made in accordance with the statutes that provides for it

The letter says that a year has passed, but only action was the original acknowledgment of receipt Dr Boyd said the board of trustees has been informed that the accounting department of the state board of control is approximately one year behind its work, and it has also been suggested that during the reorganization of the state board the claim may have been mislaid or pigeonholed

DRY ROT BLIGHT CUTS SPUD PRICES

Dry rot which is spoiling potatoes is worrying farmers in Waupaca and vicinity Inability to dispose of them also has caused concern To guard against the infected potatoes getting out to the market many dealers have closed their warehouses and refused to accept potatoes for shipment until cold weather, and the farmers have a chance to sort their crops carefully

The advent of cold weather has caused potato growers of Wisconsin to believe that the market, which has left them at the height of the harvest season with a record crop on their hands and at prices that hardly pays for the harvesting will improve

The Waupaca district including the counties of Waupaca, Waushara and Portage, is the section worst affected by dry rot Warehouses at Sheridan, Amherst, Weyauwega Iola, Scandinavia Manawa and Royalton have been closed

Because of the fear of contagion of dry rot dealers decided to close the warehouses until cold weather has set in As a result farmers are filling bins in their homes and barns, digging pits in fields and covering potatoes with straw to keep the frost from them and otherwise taking care of their crops on their own farms

"Much Catch-um No Can Eat-um"

THE cormorant is an ungainly bird that can give cards and spades even to his second cousin, the pelican, when it comes to greediness for fish.

This prize glutton keeps on fishing with unslackened zeal in spite of the choker that shrewd John Chinaman wraps around his neck to prevent the prey from being swallowed.

Cheapened motor fuel plays an equally foxy trick with misguided motorists. They are kept busily diving for the momentary saving of a penny or two on the gallon price, regardless of the fact that they are choked off from ever reaping either enjoyment of driving or final economy from their capture.

Heavy, kerosenish fuel may show a convincing chemical analysis of heat units and power, but the trouble is, no automobile motor can get the benefit of them. The short span of a motor explosion does not allow time for proper flametravel or for full consumption of the heavy kerosenish "ends" that make up poor fuel's bulk.

Now is the Time to Use Wadhams "High"

COLD weather coming! If you have been using Wadhams "Low", (or any other gas) you should switch to Wadhams "High". Your motor will start much easier. Saves your battery Best in all seasons, but a necessity in cold weather.

Wadhams True Gasoline

gives its whole benefit to the motor. Its quick-firing, full-volumed power is not strangled by bulky and harmful adulterants of kerosene and carbon.

It is not made the catspaw for unmerited profits, but renders dollar-for-dollar value in current running and infinitely greater economies in the longer life and lower upkeep of your motor.

Where Your Greenback Stages A "Comeback"

The money you put into classified advertising—either to make announcements yourself or in response to announcements made by others—is not here today and gone forever tomorrow.

It is bound to stage a triumphant comeback.

In returns, in value secured—classified advertising money expands itself many times.

And it is not at all difficult to uncover the exact reasons why this may be stated as a possible fact. The A-B-C Classified Section of the Post Crescent is a great public marketplace—where people who sell things or service meet those who wish to buy.

Anyone who has value to offer may be morally certain of finding a buyer—in other words, of receiving a generous return from the advertising expenditure.

It is comforting to know that classified advertising service is always available.

WISCONSIN MAN FINDS FAITH IN BOYS JUSTIFIED

D. W. Norris, Milwaukee, and His Mother Conduct Farm for Regeneration

By Associated Press

Mukwonago—The problem of what shall be done with the wayward boy has been solved in part in Wisconsin by D. W. Norris, Milwaukee philanthropist, who for several years has absorbed some of the output of the juvenile courts of Milwaukee, and placed it on a 572 acre farm near here.

At present there are 67 boys on the Norris farm, varying in age from eight to 16 years. Nearly 75 per cent of these boys come from "broken" homes, those where parents are divorced or separated or where a death has occured among parents. Not all of the boys are wayward or the product of the juvenile court, several being simply homeless lads

Mr. Norris and his mother personally direct the operation of the farm, although they reside in their home in Milwaukee A corps of assistants handles the details.

While all of the boys are given tasks that educate them in the care of pure-bred stock, in the raising of fine crops and the marketing of farm products, including milk, butter, cheese, fruit and vegetables, the general tone of the place is to carry out the idea of a real home, getting away entirely from the idea of a correctional institution, which the farm is not, in the sense of state supervision. It provides recreation, discipline, education, health, home and maintenance, everything to make a normal American boy. There are school facilities on the property.

Although many of the boys come from the juvenile court, and are under little or no restraint, they seldom run away from the farm. A number of them have been taken abroad on long trips by the Norris family.

Waste paper is an important commodity in Germany because of the extensive paper box business there and recently the fall in prices of the discarded pulp was felt in business circles

Adventures Of The Twins

THE SEVENTEENTH FLOOR OF THE SKY

Daddy Gander hid his magic dust-pan in the boughs of the apple tree and he and the Twins got into the little elevator run by the apple-tree fairy.

"Ding, ding!" went the fairy. "All aboard for the sky!"

He pushed a thingamajig and pulled a thingamadadger and turned a thingamobob, and the little elevator started to go up.

Up and up and up it went until it came to the seventeenth floor of the sky.

Then the apple-tree fairy pushed open a door made out of a piece of cloud and they all stepped out.

"What a funny place!" Nancy couldn't help exclaiming.

"I knew you would think so," said the aple-tree fairy. "But it is the best we can do. Such funny things get blown up to the sky!"

Hardly had he finished speaking when up hoped a frog.

"Oh, sir!" croaked the frog. "Won't you please find me a puddle. I'm so homesick I don't know what to do."

"Why my dear sir!" said the apple-tree fairy to the frog, "who ever heard of a puddle in the sky? Couldn't you swim around in a cloud or something?"

"It's very poor swimming," said the frog.

"Well," said the apple tree fairy. "I'll put you down in my book When there is another waterspout. I'll send you down to the earth."

"Thank you,' said the frog

By this time the apple-tree fairy was surrounded by all sorts of creatures, each clamboring to be heard.

"Mister Fairy Man!" said a big turkey gobbler. "There is no corn up here and I'm getting as thin as a rail trying to eat broom straws."

"Well I should think you would thank me for that," said the fairy, "it being so near to Thanksgiving and everything But be patient All the farmers are filling up their corn cribs down on the earth. It is only a matter of a few days until a tornado is sure to come along and blow bushels of corn up to the sky. By the way, did yu see the Cow-Wita-the-Crumpled-Horn- or the Rooster-That-Crowed-in-The-Morn?"

"I'll go and ask the Scare-Crow," said the gobbler.

Pretty soon he came slowly back. "They are not here," he said, "the Scare-Crow knows them well and he would be sure to know."

"Dear, dear!" said Daddy Gander. "Let us go and look for ourselves"

But the Tattered-Man and his wife were not to be found Or Jack's house either. "Something else must have happened to it," said Daddy Gander.

"I don't know what," said the apple-tree fairy. "I surely hope they find it. It had such a cute front porch 'n everything. I watched every nail he put into it."

They all got into the elevator and ding, ding! Back they came to the apple tree where Daddy Gander found his magic dust-pan just as he had left it.

PRINCESS UNBOBBED

To bob or not to bob is a qestion just as vexing to the Indian maiden as it is to her pale-faced sister. Princess Jewel Dawn (above) of the Wylackie tribe refuses to surrender to the styles, but Ellen Norris (below) of the Klamath tribe finally has done so. The tribes live near the Oregon-California boundary.

Kids Can Have Fun But They Must Be Careful

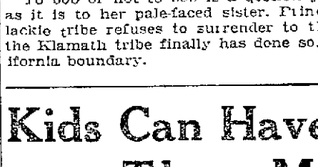

Friday night is spook night and all persons with weak hearts are urged to keep within doors and behind drawn shades. On the other hand, it is possible that there will be fewer real ghosts this Halloween than formerly because they might be mistaken for Ku Klux Klan members.

It is more likely that youthful pranksters will stick to the oldfash loned jack o'lanterns, squawkers and rattlers. Witches may adopt vacuum cleaners as the more modern method of locomotion since riding academies report a shortage of brooms.

Appleton police will be on hand to keep an eye on the mischief makers and see that the sport does not be come too boisterous or too rough It is understood that the bluecoats will wink at any innocent prank, but they have strict orders to guard against destruction of property. Every member of the force, both the day and night shifts, will be on duty tonight and remain so until the rumpus is over.

Chief George T. Prim of the Appleton police department issued a warning against the wilful destruction of property and especially against the soaping of windows Since soap often contains hard substances it is likely to do damage to the windows, he said.

The Rev. F L. Ruessman was in charge of the services Bearers were John Knuijt, Edward Knuijt, Max Islinger, Joseph Kroll, Joseph Kraft, and John Kraft. Members of Sacred Heart and Holy Name societies, in which Mr. Fass held offices, attended in a body.

It Happens Every Day

When you've been looking around for a good used runabout and you find plenty of used ones, but no good ones—at your idea of a fair price—

And some that are offered to you look like a million dollars in the garage and then sound like change for a half-dollar when they get out on the road for a demonstration—

And others seem to have good engines left in them, but the chassis are about as modern and good-looking as a 1910 derby hat—

And just when you're convinced that the used runabout market is thoroughly on the "blink," a friend suggests that you might take a look through The POST-CRESCENT'S Automotive columns in the classified section—

And you give the idea a try and righgt away things begin to look brighter, because you find a number of ads about cars that sound as though they might be what you want—

'And you look up the best-described one and find it's just as the ad said, "1923 model, engine like new," and that you can buy it at a real bargain figure—
